Oldcastle Precast Carolina Region Kicks Off 2017 Giving Back to the Community

VANDER, N.C. (MAY 2017) – No practical jokesters were present on April 1, 2017, just committed volunteers from Oldcastle Precast’s North Carolina Region. Kicking off their “2017 Carolina’s Give Back to the Community” initiative, employees and family members from Oldcastle Precast Vander, N.C., worked hard cleaning up a 4-mile area in Fayetteville for the community’s Annual Citywide Cleanup Day.

Each Oldcastle Precast plant in the Carolina region has made a commitment to give back to their communities in 2017 through several different volunteer programs.

For this reason, the Vander N.C. team selected Fayetteville’s Annual Citywide Cleanup program from a list of proposed projects. As a result, Vander completed the first 2017 Carolina regional community service.

Last year the annual city wide cleanup resulted in 553 volunteers picking up 11,480 pounds of litter. Each year the cleanup teams are given T-shirts, trash bags, bottled water, and gloves to complete the trash removal. Lunch is also provided to the volunteers.

Committed to having the Carolina regional facilities give back to their communities, Carolina’s Regional General Manager Kevin Blackwell explained that everyone benefits from philanthropic efforts. Giving back to the community in any way, shape, or form is a win-win proposition.

“We are very proud of the Vander team for being the first to accomplish this in 2017. Our team members feel great about helping others,” stated Kevin.

Regional Operations Manager Craig Cheek remarked, "I would like to give a special thank you to Keoki Broad and Glenn Johnson for planning the community service project and thank everyone who donated their time for this cause. As a matter of fact, we received a great deal of positive feedback from the community and the team enjoyed the camaraderie."
